The Grub-ſtreet Journal. NUMB. 371.

THURSDAY, FEBRUART 3, 1736.

Gentlemen,

HAVING been otherwiſe engaged, I could not well ſend you the following Remarks ſooner, on the idle, pretending, extravagant Dream againſt Punch, publiſhed in your 360th Journal of Nov. 8th laſt. The Author Dr. CHEYNE, runs on there with ſuch a dictatorial, or preceptorial authority, at the ſame time making ſo very free with the common vehicles or nouriſhment of his fellow creatures, that it ſeems abſolutely neceſſary to defend our Liquor. And tho' probably I could, as well as himſelf, part with what is here pleaded for: but as I do not yet ſee it convenient, much leſs neceſſary, ſo I would not part with it over quietly. It was ſurely the invention of Chriſtians (not Heathens, as he pretends) and conſequently rather a Chriſtian Liquor, ſince not uſed in America by the Indians, at leaſt, before the Chriſtians were ſettled there. Neither was it known in the Eaſt Indies before Chriſtians came amongſt them. Thus it ſeems plain, that it was the Heatheniſh part of mankind who did and do not drink it.

Page (of his book 42, ſect. xii, and ending p. 60 inclusive, he obſerves, that 'The common Drink here in 'England is either Water, Malt Liquor, or Wine, or 'mixtures of theſe.' —— It ſeems not a little ſurpriſing, that our exact Author, ſhould make no mention of Cyder alſo, (in his ſumming up the Engliſh Drinks) as being the proper growth of our Countrey, and probably even much more of it drank likewiſe than of Wine, which is of a foreign growth. And is ſtill yet more ſtrange to be omitted, even in this, ſaid to be the eighth edition of his Book. It is alſo obſervable, that none are more healthy and free from the gout, and moſt other maladies, than theſe people of the Weſt Countrey of England, &c. or longer lived.

'It is obſervable, ſays our Author, that every thing 'which has paſſed the fire, ſo that it has had due time 'to divide and penetrate its parts, as far as it poſſibly can, 'retains a cauſtic, corroſive, and burning quality ever af-'terwards.' Now allowing, that every thing that paſſes, or is put on, or to the fire, receives into it more or leſs of ſuch fiery particles; (according to Mr. BOYLE's Experiments of the augmentation of weight) yet I deny, that ſuch particles therefore, are either cauſtic, burning, or corroding (eſpecially when duly mixed with other bodies, or proper vehicles; but, on the contrary, do render ſuch more ſalutary, by mixing with, and duly qualifying of their crude, indigeſted, or putrid particles. (Are not Lime-waters ſucceſsfully drank in maladies? as Diabetis, &c.) But at this rate, our ſplenetic Author would not only ſeem to level his fire againſt all diſtilled Liquors in general; ſo that all Cordial Liquors from the Apothecaries are at once deſtroyed, and even their Simple Waters, which, as he obſerves, ſtill retain the fiery quality. Nay in this manner, even all Chymiſtry (for inward uſe) is thus to be ſent a packing. Nor do I ſee that the boiled or roaſt meat, which we daily eat, can at this rate eſcape this fiery trial? Unleſs he propoſes we ſhould dreſs it as the Tartars do, under their ſeat. 'Tis true, he judges fleſh meat hardly neceſſary to human life, feeding on pudding, &c. himſelf, which indeed he may bake or dreſs in like manner.

He next obſerves, 'If we conſider, that Lemons or O-'ranges could never be tranſported half ſeas-over to us, 'without rotting or ſpoiling, if gathered when wholly 'ripe, we ſhould have no great opinion of their juices. 'Every Spaniſh or Portugal merchant can inform us, that 'they muſt be gathered green, or at leaſt a month before 'they are ripe; elſe they are not fit to be ſent beyond 'the ſeas. The ſea-air, and their being ſhut up cloſe, 'gives them that golden yellow colour we ſo much ad-'mire. The juice of a crab-apple, or unripe grapes, or 'Gooſeberries, or even good juice of ſorrel, would come 'up at leaſt to their virtue of extinguiſhing the heat of 'ſpirits, if not to their flavour. And how kindly a gueſt 'ſuch juices would be to the fine fibres of weak ſtomachs 'and bowels, I leave every one to judge.'——Now I leave every one to judge whether one might not reaſonably ſuſpect, that our Author had ſpent his whole life in the Highlands, or amongſt the remoteſt mountains of Wales, there being ſhut up cloſe, and thus never to have ſeen upon an Orange-tree the fruit growing there with that yellow golden colour we ſo much admire; without the ſea-air and their being ſhut up cloſe. Such merchants alſo will inform us, that they are only gathered green the firſt of the ſeaſon; after which they are gathered ripe, and in full colour, and thus ſent us ſtill in perfection during the reſt of the ſeaſon, without ſpoiling or rotting, unleſs too long kept, which rots and ſpoils other fruit alſo. Thus when green then, they, as other unripe or winter fruit, do with time mellow, and even become ripe, by keeping, whether at land or ſea; and thus they, as well as pine-apples, by keeping gain their natural yellow colour. And ſo far I muſt obſerve to our learned Author, that a green Limon, when freſh pulled off the tree, is not fit for uſe, it being as yet bitter, ſo that by keeping, they are ripened and perfected; and thus we have them in England, no doubt, in as great perfection, as in any other part of the whole world.——As to the juice of unripe Grapes (commonly called Verjuice) or that of Sorrel, we very well know, that it is a common, and even frequently uſed, and approved of medicine for children in the ſmall pox. And, if I much miſtake not, even approved of, if not alſo uſed by his friend PITCAIRN. Nay, a glaſs of Verjuice with a lump of ſugar, is likewiſe often uſed by thoſe of delicate conſtitutions, as a remedy for the gout, as well as even Cyder recommended by ſome for the ſame. A glaſs likewiſe of juice of Limons, with Canary, is a medicine alſo known and uſed in agues, as well as ſyrup of Limons to be a thing often given in fevers. —— And I do further affirm, that there is not any thing better for the fixing of a vagrant gout into the extremities, that is, whilſt the humour is yet wandering in the bowels, loading and oppreſſing the noble parts, at which time a moderate tiff of warm Rum Punch has this excellent effect, of relieving ſuch parts, by precipitating this humour downwards, of which I could give many inſtances of thoſe I have ſo adviſed.

And now as to the dry belly-ach, he mentions in the Weſt Indies, which our Author affirms to be cauſed, brought on, and ſo muſt blow up all the cavities of the human body, and thus cut off people in a few days, which he aſſerts to be entirely owing to this poiſonous mixture; it is ſo far from being true, that it is now plainly obſerved experimentally, to be quite the contrary, that is, they are now nothing near ſo much afflicted therewith, ſince their more frequent uſe of drinking plenty of ſmall Rum Punch, well ſowered with juice of Limon or Orange; ſo that the injury ſeems indeed to have been occaſioned by the extravagant uſe of ſpirituous or ſtrong Liquors, which none pretends to adviſe or to recommend, being, no doubt, injurious to any conſtitution, in any Countrey.

Laſtly, as to the nature of Punch, its being like Opium, I abſolutelg deny this, Punch being one of the greateſt diuretics, whereas Opium is quite the contrary. And as to its poiſonous Arſenical qualities, I do affirm the ſmall kind, moderately uſed (not much ſugar, and Rum preferrable as the ſofter) to be one of the moſt wholſome Liquors to the generality, that is drank, except pure water only; and in ſome caſes, may be much preferrable even to that, when properly and medicinally uſed; unleſs to ſuch ſingular or viciated conſtitutions, who cannot bear the uſe of Limon; as there are ſuch in other particulars, &c. Thus I muſt leave our different opinions to be decided by the experience and juſt obſervation of mankind in general, that being more to be depended on, than a wild Philoſophy.

From yours,

PAUL PUZZLE QUERY, firſt couſin to
HANS LITTLEBUSTLE of Suffolk-ſtreet.

N. B. It is not a little to our comfort, that our very rational Queries from hence have entirely puzzled, and quite ſilenced the learned, &c. Should any Sophiſter ever peep into them, or unreavel them, by means of his artful ſpy-glaſſes, we'll find him work, by producing new ones, not leſs reaſonable, and modeſt.

Oxford, Jan. 15, 1736-7.

To the Society of GRUB-STREET.

Gentlemen,

THAT ſhort animadverſion in a late Paper of yours, concerning an Oath offered at the Play houſe upon ſome frivolous occaſion, cauſed me to turn to your 341ſt Journal of July 8th laſt, in which is contained a Diſſertation upon Oaths. Tho' I have as great a veneration for Oaths, as the Author of that Paper can have, (and conſequently would not have them taken but when they cannot eaſily be avoided, and then with the greateſt reverence and ſolemnity) yet I cannot but be offended at his uncandidneſs and partiality in ſeveral places. But ſince I conſider myſelf here only as a Member of this Univerſity, I ſhall not take upon me to anſwer any other part of his Diſſertation, except that paragraph in it, which relates to our behaviour as to Swearing. His words are theſe, 'But it is ſtill more ſurpriſing, that 'the ſame dangerous practice ſhould prevail in the Uni-'verſities. It is a melancholy conſideration, that a 'Student cannot paſs thro' an Academic education, 'without a ſtring of Oaths, almoſt impoſſible to be per-'formed. But there is nothing to be done in theſe cele-'brated ſchools without Swearing; there can be no 'admiſſion into any College or Hall without an Oath, 'no matriculation without an Oath and ſubſcriptions; 'no promotion to any degree without Swearing, not 'only for the Candidates themſelves, but for other ſcho-'lars in their behalf. Whether ſo much Swearing is not 'a dangerous way of initiating youth into the world; 'and whether Learning cannot be acquired without Oaths 'that are never intended to be kept, we muſt ſubmit to 'the determination of the Learned.'

Now I preſume that this Gentleman never paſs'd thro' an Academic education himſelf; for had he, I can hardly think he would have been ſo undutiful to his Alma Mater, as to aſperſe her ſo maliciouſly as he has done. The dangerous practice he is ſpeaking of, cannot be ſaid to prevail in our Univerſity: and I believe his melancholy Conſiderations will ſoon vaniſh, if it proves abſolutely falſe, that we are obliged to take a ſtring of Oaths almoſt impoſſible to be performed. There is no Oath taken at the admiſſion into any College or Hall whatſoever; at matriculation, the perſon to be admitted ſubſcribes to the Articles of Religion, and (if he have entered his ſixteenth year, not otherwiſe) takes the Oath of ſupremacy, which I need not tranſcribe; and with it, the following one, 'Ego fidem do, ad obſervandum omnia Statuta, Privile-'gia et Conſuetudines hujus Univerſitatis Oxon. Ita Deus 'me adjuvet, tactis ſacro-ſanctis Chriſti Evangeliis.' At the promotion to a Degree, this Oath is renewed, and another taken, 'To preſerve as much as lies in your power 'the peace of the Univerſity, and to endeavour to bring 'to juſtice all thoſe who break it: not to put any ſtop to 'the Peace, Concord, and Love between any Societies 'or Perſons.' The depoſition other Scholars are to make in their behalf is this, that they know or believe the perſon to be, aptum et idoneum moribus et ſcientiâ, ad eum gradum ad quem præſentatur.

Are theſe the Oaths he calls almoſt impoſſible to be performed? Is this the dangerous way of initiating youth into the world? Is it not rather an excellent regulation in order to their good behaviour? Thoſe who never intend to keep ſuch Oaths as theſe, are not bound to come and enter among us; and it would be happy for the Univerſity, did ſuch perſons go to acquire their Learning ſomewhere elſe. As I doubt not but you have ſome reſpect for the Univerſity, I hope you will print this in vindication of them, and you will thereby oblige,

Gentlemen,

Your humble ſervant,

PHILORCHUS.

Jan. 14, 1736.

Gentlemen,

I BEG you would take an opportunity to ſet forth the inhumanity in ſuffering poor wretches under ſentence of death to lye in that miſerable manner as at preſent in the Cells of Newgate; whereby it has often happened the poor creatures have died by the filth and ſtench of the place before their execution. This inhumanity can anſwer no good purpoſe; becauſe it is for the benefit of Society that Malefactors ſhould receive a publick puniſhment, in order to deter others from doing the like; whereas by this means that good end is defeated. We have had two inſtances lately of perſons dying in the Cells, and more I am told are in a dangerous way; which is the occaſion of my giving you this trouble. Sometimes it has been thought proper to confine perſons even before their trial in theſe apartments, and then it may poſſibly happen an innocent perſon may die in a miſerable manner; or even after condemnation, a Criminal may be an object of mercy, and by loſing his life in this confinement, may be deprived of reaping that compaſſion which was intended. I think, Gentlemen, that common humanity ſhould teach us to behave in a different manner to our fellow creatures; and therefore, I hope, if you'll be ſo good to repreſent this grievance in a proper light, that due care will be taken to keep the Cells in a decent and cleanly manner, that thereby the ill conſequences abovementioned may be prevented. Be pleaſed therefore to take notice of theſe particulars, and you'll oblige,

Your humble ſervant,

PHILO-PATRIÆ.

The Black finding he was likely to be taken, got up one of the Chimnies, from whence they they brought him down by burning straw. He was immediately carried before Lord Carpenter, who committed him to Newgate. From the PEGASUS in Grub-street.

Gentlemen,

MR. WRIGHT of Durham, having, by his Letter in yeur Journal, No. 369, attack'd my character in so publick a manner as a Pirater of his Scheme. I hope you will do me like justice in my own vindication; that the world may be convinc'd the aspersions are equally false as malicious.

He asserts, that my Universal Geography corresponds with his, therefore it must be pirated from him. In the first place, all my friends here saw the very same Map above a year and a half since, which I sometime ago sent to Mr. CAVE before ever I had seen Mr. WRIGHT's, or indeed heard of it. In the second place, Mr. WRIGHT has represented the Penumbra as a perfect circle, nor did he ever hint to the contrary. My Map exhibits the same as a foliat curve, a monstrous difference indeed! My Scheme, as far as I know, is entirely new; Mr. WRIGHT's was well known 40 years ago. What will not the overweening conceit of ambitious spirits pretend to? When they impudently assert a Scheme to be theirs, which they never once dreamt of, 'till I put them in the way; and I dare affirm, if Mr. WRIGHT had honour enough left, he must acknowledge, that he was ignorant of the method of representing the Universal Geography in a Map before mine was publish'd. 'Tis not only the Geography of this Eclipse, but 40 others, (many of which will not happen within the compass of this century) I have now by me done after the same manner, and have shewn them to several Gentlemen of integrity, whom I might appeal to, if there were occasion.

As to the section of the Annulus in its ingress and exit, being represented in a strait line, it ought to be so, seeing 'tis the diameter of the ring at the middle of the central Eclipse, this I made as plain as possible, by writing middle of Eclipse at sun-rise upon that line which cuts it off, referring you to my Map of the British isles for the figure of the Annulus.

That the central track is in the middle of the ring, is another objection; I appeal to the section of the Annulus over Britain, whether I thought it so or not. The inconsiderable excess of the northern part at so small a scale, in the general Map would not bear representing; in the particular one it wou'd, and is accordingly done.

As to agreeing with him in Digits, it may well be so in many cases, but what shall we say of above 500 places in my Map where the quantity of the Digits is exhibited, and not one of them mention'd by Mr. WRIGHT, What! were these pirated too?

His last material objection is to the section of the Annulus over Britain; this he also affirms was copied from him; if so, I must have copied his unpardonable blunder of representing the course of the ring in a strait line, which all Astronomers know is a curve, and is accordingly so represented by me. Mr. WRIGHT may be asham'd of himself, when I had taken no notice of his errors, but in a handsome manner, to accuse me of pirating his Scheme.

His general Map is the situation of the disk at the middle of the Eclipse, but the way of the shade, by that method of projecting, is wrong in all places, except where it just crosses the Lunar Axis; this was what I found fault with, because, when one sees the Moon's way, crossing over by the Land's-end of England into France, which should pass over Scotland into Norway, may not one say, this is not the true course of the shade, without having their character traduc'd? I refer the Case to all the Astronomical body. Mean time, as I am averse to all Disputes, I heartily forgive Mr. WRIGHT, and hope his returning to better temper, will entirely blot out all vestiges of this idle Dispute.

FOREIGN NEWS.

THURSDAY, Jan. 27. We hear from Paris, that one of the dancers at the Opera, call'd La Salle, so remarkable for her chastity as to have obtain'd the name of Vestal, has at last surrender'd to a young English Nobleman, who was introduced to her at an Assembly in woman's apparel, and so far insinuated himself into her favour, as to be permitted to take part of her bed. DA.

MONDAY, Jan. 31. The States General have been informed, by a Letter from their Minister at Madrid, that Mr. Keene, the British Minister, has demanded of his Catholick Majesty, that a Schedule for a South-sea ship should be granted, and an immediate and full satisfaction for the depredations of the Spanish privateers made, or a categorical answer given to these demands; which has so irritated the Queen of Spain, that she takes every occasion of menacing the British nation. DA. — Great preparations are making by the Spaniards for the formal siege of some great fortress LP.

WEDNESDAY, Feb 2. Instead of expeditions and sieges, they write from Madrid, that the Catholick Court talks of discharging a part of their transports, and of making a reduction in all their regiments about the middle of March. DP. DA.

PROPOSALS for Printing by Subſcription,
An Excellent Work, entitled,

A Compleat Hiſtory of the HOLY BIBLE, contained in the Old and New Teſtament, and Apocypha in which are inſerted the Occurrences that happened during the Space of about four hundred Years, from the Days of the Prophet Malachi to the Birth of our Bleſſed Saviour, and thoſe not omitted in all ſome of the Works of this Nature. With the Incarnation, Birth, Doctrine, Paſſion Reſurrection, and Aſcenſion of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt; and a Journal of his Peregrinations: Extracted from the four Evangeliſts, the Acts of the Apoſtles and other Writings. Illuſtrated with Notes, explaining ſeveral difficult paſſages and reconciling many Texts, that are ſeemingly contradictory. The Whole collected from the beſt Paſſages Stackhouſe, Howell, and other Writers on the ſacred Scriptures.

By LAURENCE CLARKE, M. A.

This Work ſhall be printed on the following Conditions, viz.

I. That it will make two Volumes in Quarto, and be printed on a very large new Letter, and fine Dutch Paper; and make but between fifty and ſixty Numbers.

II. That a curious Set of large Hiſtorical Bible Cuts ſhall be annex'd to the Work.

III. That two whole Sheets work'd off at the Letter Preſs, and one Cut ſhall be deliver'd every Monday at the Subſcribers own Houſes, or any Place they ſhall appoint, at the price of Four Pence; and that the firſt Number ſhall be delivered on Monday the 14th inſtant.

IV. That in order to render it of the greateſt Service, it will be ſtitch'd up in White Paper inſtead of Blue; and have the whole Week's News, Foreign and Domeſtick, printed thereon, in the ſame Manner as the Weekly Journals; with the prices of Goods, Grain, Stocks, Weekly Bill, Liſt of Bankrupts, &c.

V. That every one of the Plates ſhall be dedicated to ſome of the Royal Family, or to ſome of the Nobility and Biſhops, with their different Coats of Arms engraven at the Bottom. The firſt Cut to be publiſh'd with No. I. is the Creation of the World, dedicated to their Majeſties.

VI. That every Subſcriber ſhall have Gratis with No. I. a curious Print of the Effigies of the Author as a Frontiſpiece to the Work.

Particular Care has been taken to render this Work uſeful and inſtructive to all, even to the meaneſt Reader; being abſolutely neceſſary to be had in all Chriſtian Families, for their better Underſtanding and Improvement in the holy Scriptures, rendering the ſame both entertaining and delightful. As there has been already great Encouragement given to this Undertaking by the Royal Family, Heads of the Clergy, and ſeveral perſons of the firſt Rank and Quality, as well as by the Societies for propagating the Goſpel in Foreign parts, and for promoting Chriſtian Knowledge here at Home. 'Tis not doubted but many others will follow their commendable Example in encouraging this pious and learned Work; more particularly, as it will be of ſuch ſingular and ready Advantage in inſtructing Youth in the Rudiments of the Scripture. As the firſt Number is to be publiſh'd on Monday the 14th of this Inſtant February, it is deſir'd that ſuch perſons as intend to ſubſcribe to this valuable Work, will be as expeditious as poſſible, in giving Notice to Mr James Stanton, Diſtiller, at the Empty Gallon Pot, in Black and White Court in the Old Baily, (by Letter or otherwiſe) whom I have (being the ſole Proprietor) empowered to publiſh the Work for me Weekly, and they may be aſſured of having the Numbers left punctually at their own Houſes, or any place they ſhall appoint, either in Town or Country, which Favour ſhall be gratefully acknowledg'd by their

Humble Servant, LAURENCE CLARKE, M. A.

Note, It may alſo be had of all Hawkers of News Papers, they being empower'd to take in Subſcriptions.
